Same story 491 before Christ (Darius) and 2026 after Christ (Trump)

In 491 BC, the Dictator Darius sent envoys to several Greek cities with demands for land and water. Darius had noted with hatred how the state of Athens had become the closest thing to today's democracies and with a lot of power among the people. He wants to quell this development in time. Democracy was born around 500 BC with Athens' unexpected development away from the usual rule through a Dictatorship. The request for water and land is the traditional method for creating demands for submission.

Donald Trump is using the same method now in 2025 and 2026. Canada is being pressured with proposals to become the 51st state in the USA. Greenland and Denmark are being pressured with Donald Trump having fantasies that the USA needs Greenland for strategic reasons. Venezuela there he has made up that the main reason for capturing their Dictator is a drug trade that harms the USA. The reason is to control Venezuela's enormous oil reserves.

Back to the Dictator Darius who was an early Trump. Darius's plans were to conquer all of Greece, which consisted of several small kingdoms, so-called state-states. Trump has a dream that the United States will include Canada, Greenland, Mexico and Central America. Elon Musk has planted the idea in Trump's brain. This is an early fantasy of an author from a book published in the late 1800s and which developed into a movement in the 1920s and 1930s and was so extreme that it was banned.

Darius managed to scare some small states into submission. As if in the present day Denmark had handed over all of Greenland immediately to the United States or Canada had decided to become part of the United States immediately. There is no doubt that Donald Trump is a modern Darius.

Which is strange in a so-called Democracy like the United States has been. The United States has a problem with the Supreme Court being more like a tool for Trump and also the Senate. The idea in the United States with the separation of powers was precisely to prevent a Darius from taking power, i.e. Donald Trump. Trump has owned the book Mein Kampf and has read it. He has also said that he wished he had the same type of Generals that Adolf Hitler had, who carried out what they were ordered to do and no matter how cruel the actions they were ordered to perform.

But sometimes in the states that Darius sent envoys to, the two largest states were not at all afraid of the Persians. The Spartans chose to drown Darius's envoy in a well and sent a reply to Darius "We had your envoy drowned in a well and so that he can look for earth and water there".

Athens, which was now the closest thing to a Democracy, chose to put the envoy before a court. The sentence was a death sentence which was also carried out. The same effect actually killed the envoy.

Sparta regretted its actions and sent two nobles to Darius whom he was free to execute as compensation for the killed envoy. Darius refused to settle the debt. He did not want to lose the upper hand and he wanted to conquer Sparta. Darius sent 600 ships and 25,000 soldiers against Greece.

In 491 BC the Persians landed at Marathon.

An Athenian messenger ran all the way to Sparta to get help, which was rejected. The Spartans were busy with a party and could not come until it was over. Interesting that the USA is now celebrating 250 years of freedom in 2026 when Donald Trump is acting as if he is a dictator. Trump is not going to come to Ukraine's immediate aid, he is celebrating his latest exploits by kidnapping a dictator Maduro from Venezuela and also his wife. Of course, the same story is repeating itself. 491 + 2026 years later.

Darius's European expedition was a major event in his reign, which began with the invasion of Thrace. Darius also conquered many cities of the northern Aegean, Paeonia, while Macedonia submitted voluntarily, after the demand of earth and water, becoming a vassal kingdom. He then left Megabyzus to conquer Thrace, returning to Sardis to spend the winter. The Greeks living in Asia Minor and some of the Greek islands had submitted to Persian rule already by 510 BCE. Nonetheless, there were certain Greeks who were pro-Persian, although these were largely based in Athens. To improve Greek-Persian relations, Darius opened his court and treasuries to those Greeks who wanted to serve him. These Greeks served as soldiers, artisans, statesmen and mariners for Darius. However, the increasing concerns among the Greeks over the strength of Darius's kingdom along with the constant interference by the Greeks in Ionia and Lydia were stepping stones towards the conflict that was yet to come between Persia and certain of the leading Greek city states.

Darius the Great, was the third King of Kings of the Achaemenid Empire, reigning from 522 BCE until his death in 486 BCE.

He ruled the empire at its territorial peak, when it included much of West Asia, parts of the Balkans (Thrace–Macedonia and Paeonia) and the Caucasus, most of the Black Sea's coastal regions, Central Asia, the Indus Valley in the far east, and portions of North Africa and Northeast Africa including Egypt (Mudrâya), eastern Libya, and coastal Sudan.

Greatest territorial extent of the Achaemenid Empire, achieved during the reign of Darius the Great (522–486 BC) The Achaemenid Empire is named after Achaemenes, who is credited as the progenitor of the Achaemenid dynasty.

Sparta was recognised as the leading force of the unified Greek military during the Greco-Persian Wars, in rivalry with the rising naval power of Athens. Sparta was the principal enemy of Athens during the Peloponnesian War (431–404 BC)

The Battle of Marathon took place in 490 BC during the first Persian invasion of Greece. It was fought between the citizens of Athens, aided by Plataea, and a Persian force commanded by Datis and Artaphernes. The battle was the culmination of the first attempt by Persia under King Darius I to subjugate Greece.

At the time of the battle, Sparta and Athens were the two largest city-states in Greece. Once the Ionian revolt was finally crushed by the Persian victory at the Battle of Lade in 494 BC, Darius began making plans to subjugate Greece. In 490 BC, he sent a naval task force under Datis and Artaphernes across the Aegean Sea, to subjugate the Cyclades islands and then to make punitive attacks on Athens and Eretria. Reaching the island of Euboea in mid-summer after a successful campaign in the Aegean, the Persians proceeded to besiege and capture Eretria. The Persian force then sailed for Attica, landing in the bay near the town of Marathon. The Athenians, joined by a small force from Plataea, marched to Marathon, and succeeded in blocking the two exits from the plain of Marathon. The Athenians also sent a message to the Spartans asking for support. When the messenger arrived in Sparta, the Spartans were already involved in a religious festival and gave this as a reason for not coming to help the Athenians.

After Miltiades (the general of the Greek forces) defeated Darius' Persian forces, the Persians decided to sail from Marathon to Athens in order to sack the unprotected city. Miltiades ordered all his hoplite forces to march "double time" back to Athens, so that by the time Darius' troops arrived they saw the same Greek force waiting for them.
